

Mission Statement

The words that describe me best are also my best qualities. I am patient, caring, and understanding. Having four younger siblings requires lots of patience and the age difference makes you see things from a different point of view, so you can understand what they're saying and where they're coming from. I also use patience at my work when dealing with frustrated or impatient customers. You need to always be patient and listen and not take to heart what they're saying or how they're acting. Understand that they may be having a bad day and I always care enough to try and make their day a little better. Whether it is by smiling or telling them they have a great shirt. Little things like that always seem to work. I am still deciding on what I want to do, but based on my attributes, and the things I like and dislike, I'll probably do something in Human Services. I have a positive attitude towards life, people, and work. To get by in life we must do all three. I might as well make it enjoyable by being an optimist. What's most important to me; however, is my faith, family, and friends.

My academic goals for the future are to graduate high school, figure out what I want to do for my career (it has to be something I'll love doing), graduate college, get married, work on my career, and then have a family. I also want to be active in my younger siblings lives and my older sister's who is currently at college. I plan on achieving all the things I want by working and studying hard, and when I am home I plan on playing hard. I believe that everyone should be treated as I'd wanted to be treated (Golden Rule.) I sincerely believe that will make life that much easier and my goals easier to accomplish if I'm not having or causing problems with other people.

I plan on getting a high school and college degree. I will take classes that interest me in college and hopefully I will stumble upon my future career. Or discover new things I like to do that will lead me there. From my classes and experience I'll have the knowledge to do whatever I decide to do. It will take lots of hard work and time, but I'm prepared and committed to do it. In 5 years I plan on being graduated from high school and have my bachelor's degree. In 10 years I want to have a stable job and be married with about three children. By just being a positive, hard working person I plan on achieving my goals and being a successful person.
